“From Interrogation to Elicitation:
A Short History of Suspect Questioning Practices”

This presentation will take the audience through a short history of North American police questioning practices, highlighting the three major developmental stages that have taken place from the 1930's to the present day. Those three stages include: physical (confession-centric); psychological (confession-centric); and, psychological (information seeking). While police routinely question victims, witnesses, and suspects, this presentation will focus primarily on the questioning of suspects in the context of criminal investigations. The study of public police questioning practices is important to all investigators, as police practices... more at acfi.ca
